A.

If we compare the nations with a big family, we see that like family members, sometimes they all live together in complete peace and tranquility, and sometimes they start fighting over minor differences. This discord between nations sometimes becomes very intense and leads to a bloody and harsh clashes, which is called "the war".

B.

About a thousand years ago, there lived a young man named Muhammad bin Zakariya Razi in the city of Ray. He had great passion for acquiring knowledge and in his youth, he learned mathematics, astronomy, and most of the sciences of his time. At this time, he became very interested in alchemy. He wanted to get a substance with which to convert other metals into gold.

C.

In ancient times, there was a King who used to love hunting who would constantly ride a horse to hunt and used to throw lasso in the neck of the prey. This King had a falcon which would bring birds from sky in one flight. The King loved the falcon a great deal and always trained it on his hand. Incidentally the King held it on his hand and had gone for hunting. A deer passed in front of him and the King in hot pursuit followed the deer but could not find it and became separated from his company. Some of his servants followed him but the king was faster than the wind in speed.

One stream became separated from the mountain and suddenly came in contact with a stone.

It humbly pleaded before the hard stone, Oh fortunate one! give passage to me.

The granite who was stone hearted slapped the stream and asked it to maintain distance.

I do not move a little even by the forceful flood, who are you that I should give you a passage.

The stream was not disheartened by the response and began to erode and struggled.

It struggled and strove hard and finally overcame the hard granite.
